

FREE MEDICAL HELP

Praksis Polyclinics

The Praksis Polyclinics in Athens and Thessaloniki offer free of charge primary medical service for vulnerable people, including migrants and refugees. Both clinics are open to everybody, even those not entitled to access the public health system in Greece.

Praksis can also refer people to medical, psychological and legal support if needed.

- In Athens: there are general practitioners, paediatricians, gynaecologists, dentists and a pharmacy;

- In Thessaloniki: there are general practitioners, gynaecologists/obstetricians, dentists, dermatologists, ophthalmologists and a pharmacy.

Both Polyclinics are open Monday to Friday from 9.00 to 17.00 offering the following services:

- Dentist (only for extraction and sealing);
- Gynaecologist;
- General practitioner;
- Pharmacy (from 9.00 to 13.00);
- Neurologist (only Thursdays from 11.30 to 14.00). Clinics run clinical examination, and specific laboratory tests or direct people to other specialist doctors, partner medical organizations, or the national health care service facilities who work with Praksis. It's recommended you arrive at the clinic by 9.00 and take a number in order not to wait very long. Patients needing to see a dentist should go on Friday to make an appointment, that is usually scheduled for the following week. To get assistance from Praksis Polyclinics:
