LEGAL AID

Asylum seekers have the right to consult, at their own cost, a lawyer or other legal advisor on matters relating to their application. Free legal assistance is only provided for judicial appeals before the Administrative Court of Appeals upon the applicant's request and is subject to (a) an insufficient means test, establishing the applicant's inability to afford legal representation; and (b) a merits test, determining that the application has a "probability" of success. The choice of legal representative is made on the basis of a list drawn up by the relevant Bar Association. However, in order to submit an application for legal aid, the asylum seeker needs to hire a lawyer, he/she has no choice over his /her legal representative, as lawyers are appointed from the list designated by the Bar Association. The low rates and the great delays in remuneration awarded to legal aid lawyers act as a severe disincentive for legal professionals to take up asylum cases, adversely affecting both the availability and the quality of free legal assistance. In Greece, free legal assistance and representation in all stages of the administrative and judicial asylum procedure has always been provided by NGOs according to their capacity. The provision of free legal assistance, as it is currently provided in Greece by NGOs lacking relevant funding following the end of the European Refugee Fund (ERF) in early 2015, in no way may be perceived as satisfying the requirements set in the law and directly affects the quality of the asylum procedure. As of February 2016, the recast APD Directive has not been transposed into Greek legislation and no formal free legal aid system has been put in place as regards either the first or second instance of the administrative asylum procedure. For further information on legal aid for asylum seekers in Greece, see AIDA Country Report: Greece, available at: www.asylumineurope.org/reports/country/greece
